

About the Authors

Paul and Pam Hainline are students of God’s Word who write from the conviction that Scripture interprets Scripture. Their work is rooted in a desire to point readers back to the biblical text — not to opinions, traditions, or denominational systems. They are the founders of NobleMind Press (noblemind.study).

“In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.”
— Genesis 1:1

You don’t need a church background to read this book. You don’t need to know anything about the Bible. You just need to be willing to look.

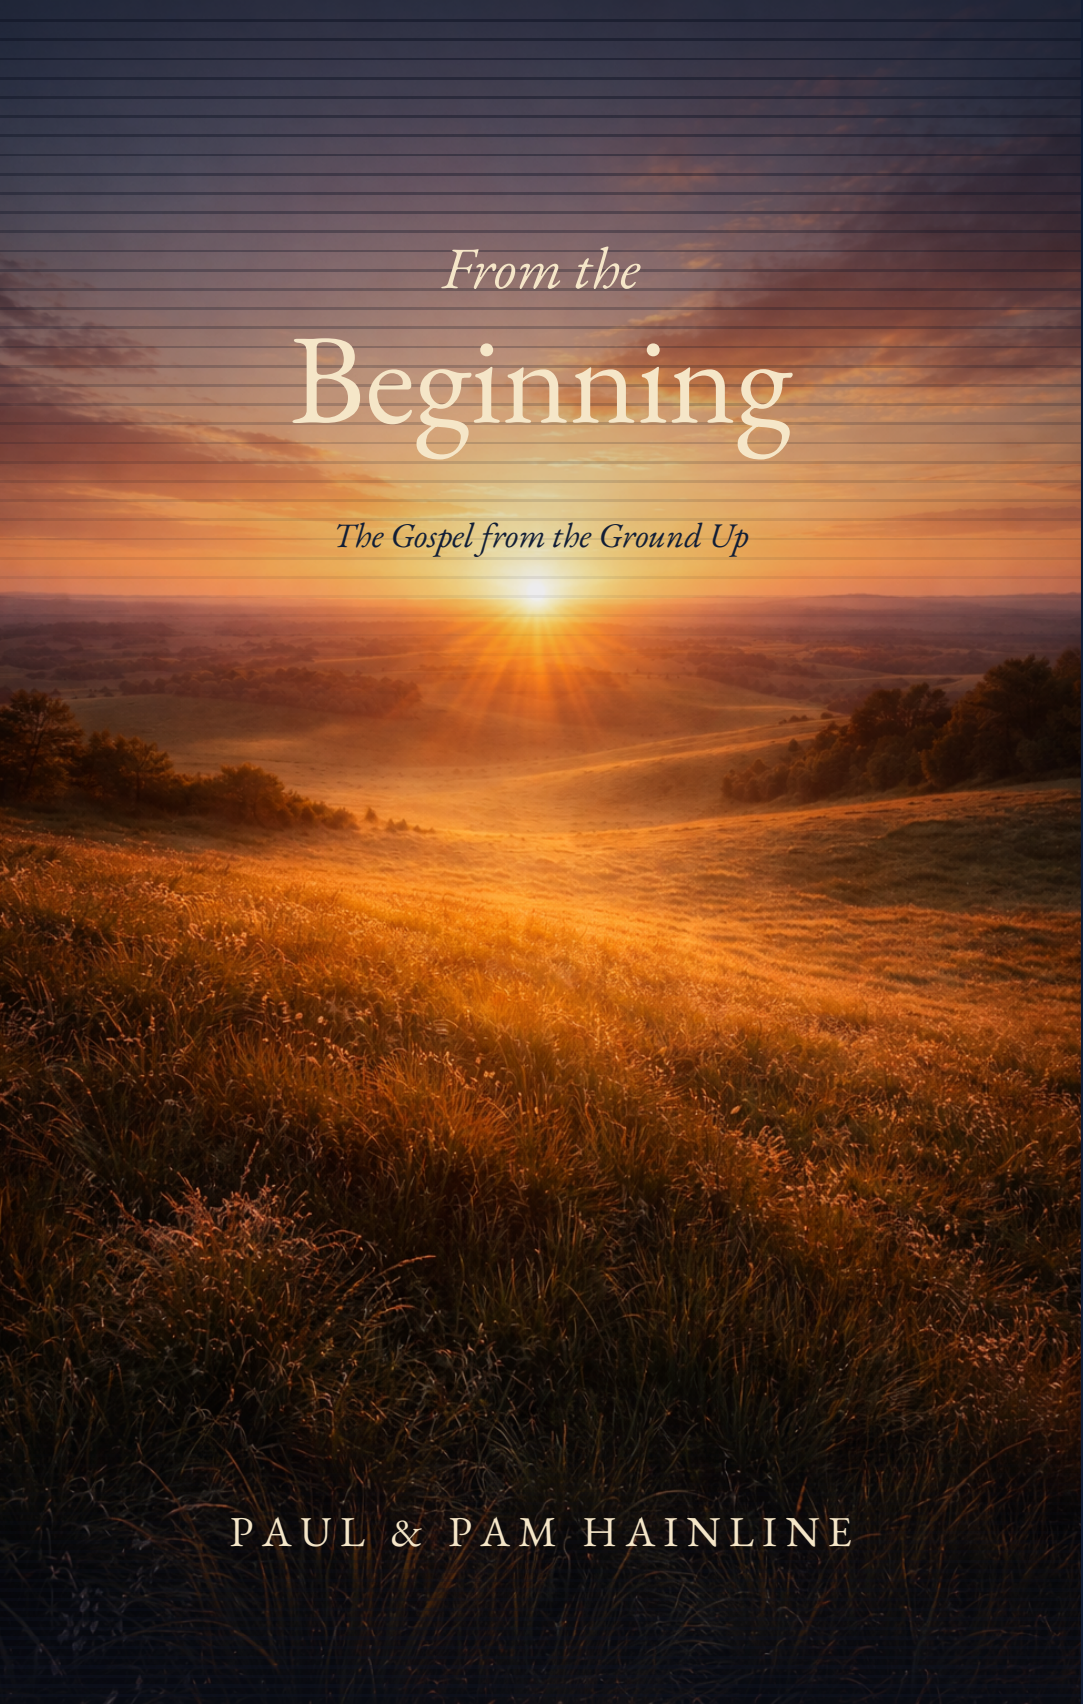

From the Beginning starts where the Bible starts — with a God who created you on purpose, who knew you before you were born, and who had a plan for your rescue before the world began. In ten chapters, it walks you through the whole story: who God is, what went wrong, the long thread of promise that runs through Scripture, and the Christ who fulfilled every word of it.

This is not a book of opinions. Every claim is anchored in Scripture. Every chapter builds on the last. And by the end, you’ll understand not just what God did — but what He asks you to do about it.

If you’ve been looking for the starting line, this is it.

The Gospel from the Ground Up

PAUL & PAM HAINLINE

From the Beginning is written for two generations — parents who drifted from faith and stopped reading Scripture, and their children who grew up with little to no knowledge of God.

Starting from creation and building toward the resurrection, each chapter follows the thread of promise that God wove through centuries of history. No assumptions. No church jargon. Just the story the Bible tells — told the way Paul told it in Athens, starting from the ground up.

The tone is conversational — like sitting across from someone at a coffee shop. The evidence is scriptural. And the invitation is open to anyone willing to look.
